"JJ Singh took a coral and gold necklace and a sentimental piece of my mom's costume jewelry and redesigned them into four matching cuff bracelets so that I could share a piece of my mom with each of my sisters for their birthdays.

Her incredibly magnificent bracelets created an unexpected "moment" at our family dinner table as I watched my family stumble back to a time when our mom still graced our family table along side of us. It was like resurrecting her love and passing it along to them."

Filler-Corn Wins Special Election Squeaker

Democrat wins by 37, Bolognese concedes.

By Julia O'Donoghue
The Connection

Springfield resident Charlie Wilson spent 30 years in the Navy and used to voted for Republicans. But he has become dissatisfied with the direction of the political party and, much to the satisfaction of his left-leaning wife, now votes for Democrats.

“My priorities changed as I got older. When I became a parent, I developed a strong interest in public education,” said Wilson. “My daughter is at James Madison University studying to be a teacher.”

Speaking outside his polling place at Orange Hunt Elementary School, Wilson said he had voted for Democrat Eileen Filler-Corn in the March 2 special election for the 41st District delegate seat.

Filler-Corn, a Springfield resident with two children in Fairfax County Public Schools, said voters told her proposed cuts to local school system was their top concern.

“Education is everyone’s number one concern. That is why we all moved here,” said Filler-Corn, who appears to have edged out Republican Kerry Bolognese, who emphasized lower taxes, by just 37 votes.

Fairfax County unofficial election results show Filler-Corn, with 5,753 votes, beating Bolognese, with 5,726 votes, by a margin of three-tenths of a percentage point.

Bolognese conceded the race, though he was entitled to a recount. In Virginia, the government automatically covers the cost of recount for an election won by a half a percentage point or less.

Filler-Corn and the Democrats declared victory at the candidate’s victory party at the Springfield Austin Grill on election night.

“This is a great night for Fairfax County and for our schools.”

Locals Locked Up for Charity

Friends nominated to be ‘jailed’ for MDA event.

By Bonnie Hobbs
The Connection

Normally, getting arrested and placed in jail isn’t something anyone wants to do. But it’s a different matter when it’s to raise money for charity. That’s what happened last week when Bonefish Grill in Greenbriar hosted a fund-raiser for the Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA).

Called the Fairfax Lock-Up, the event took place Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 24, and the participants were all nominated by friends to be “jailed” for a good cause.

“Acting as ‘police officers,’ Fairfax County firefighters go to their places of business and ‘arrest’ them,” said Meghan Anderson, fund-raising coordinator for the Greater Washington Area Muscular Dystrophy Association. “They’re charged with having a big heart.”

Participants were then brought to the restaurant in a “paddy wagon” van and their “mug shot” photos were taken behind “bars.” Then they paid their “bail” money (MDA contribution) to get out of “jail.” Next, they were treated to gourmet “bread and water” for lunch.

“Bonefish graciously donated the space, food, servers, everything, as its contribution to the event,” said Anderson. “And employees of Kohl’s, Fair Lakes, greeted people, gave out name tags and candy and took ‘mug shot’ photos of them wearing black-and-white-striped ‘jail uniforms.’ Bonefish is also a national MDA sponsor and does a fund raiser for us, every year, in addition to this, so they’re great.”

A $25 donation funds a fl u shot; and according to the MDA, $85 funds one minute of research and hope for a cure. A $100 contribution pays for a support group session, and $800 sends a child to an MDA summer camp.

“We hope to raise $15,000 today,” said Anderson during the event. “We’ve already raised $11,000 because each person participating gets a fund-raising Web site where their friends and family can contribute. MDA staff, AKA ‘parole officers,’ call them to see how they’re doing, provide motivation and encourage them. They raise money for four to eight weeks prior to the lock-up.”

Enjoying lunch together at Bonefish were Sally Robertson, Trish Page and Carol Miller who all took part in the fund-raiser. Representing Business Finance Group of Fair Oaks, Robertson collected the most money — $3,635.

“Our company is a nonprofit organization, providing commercial mortgages to small businesses, and we feel like we need to be good community citizens and participate in fund-raising activities,” she said.

“They’re charged with having a big heart.”

Inova Kellar Center honors its founders, Betty and Art Kellar.

By Bonnie Hobbs
The Connection

It was 20 years ago when Betty and Art Kellar spoke with Knox Singleton, CEO of Inova Health System, about their ideas for improving substance abuse and mental-health services for youth in the community. That led to a partnership changing how they received such services.

It culminated in the creation of Inova Kellar Center, a nonprofit, comprehensive, mental health/substance abuse and special education school. It was built in 1991 in the City of Fairfax and moved to the Fair Oaks Business Park on Staples Mill Road in 2006.

The Kellers died, shortly afterward, but their legacy lives on in the work done at the center and in all the people who have been helped there. A memorial fund established after their deaths provides treatment and support services to children and families, regardless of their ability to pay.

ON TUESDAY, Feb. 16, they were honored for their vision and benevolence during a special reception at the center. Their daughters attended and saw the unveiling of a portrait and...

Recycling Cards

At the February meeting, President Bobbi Green, second from right, and officers of the George Mason Republican Women’s Club (GMRWC) box old Christmas cards for mailing to St. Jude’s Ranch for Children in Nevada. The children use the recycled cards to make new cards for sale, thus learning both the importance of ‘going green’ and how to raise funds. For more information on GMRWC, call 703-281-4655.

Man Found Not Guilty of Rape

In April, City of Fairfax Police charged a 27-year-old Fairfax man with raping a 16-year-old girl. But after a jury trial in Fairfax County Circuit Court, Hugo Alfredo Rivera-Maravilla was found not guilty.

Police were called to Inova Fairfax Hospital on Monday, April 27, at 7:05 p.m., to talk to the girl. They said she attended a party at Rivera-Maravilla’s home on April 26, fell asleep and was assaulted by him, early the next morning.

He was later indicted by the grand jury and stood trial, Feb. 2-4, before Judge Charles Maxfield. After hearing all the evidence and testimony, the jury deliberated and reached a verdict of not guilty.

Citizens Police Academy

The City of Fairfax Police Department is conducting the third session of its Citizens Police Academy from March 18 through May 20. It offers an opportunity for interested citizens to learn about the role of the Police Department and its many functions, services and capabilities. Initiated in 2007 by Police Chief Richard Rappoport, the objective isn’t to train individuals to be police officers, but to produce informed citizens.

Citizens and police officers meet each other face-to-face in a neutral, friendly setting, so each group develops an understanding of the other. By helping citizens learn about its operations and personnel, the Department hopes to reduce fears and misconceptions that may exist and which result in conflicts caused simply by lack of understanding.

Guilty of Having a Heart

“We have a really good staff, and one of our loan officers, Denny Kiepelick, grew a beard over the Christmas holidays, and kept it until a week or two ago,” said Robertson. “Then the staff each paid $5 a stroke to shave his beard. We did it on Feb. 17 and raised $320 that way. Then several of us matched that amount, so we ended up with $1,060 from the staff of 20 people.”

But they didn’t stop there. Business Finance Group works with attorneys, title companies and bankers, and they, too, contributed. The largest donation, $500, came from Walker Title of Fair Oaks.

“I think we did pretty well,” said Robertson. “The entire staff was excited about it. I couldn’t bring them all to lunch here today, so we’ll celebrate with lunch at the office tomorrow.”

Page, who works in Fair Oaks, has no idea who had nominated her to participate in the lock-up, but she was glad to do it. “It’s a great cause,” she said. “I have a couple friends who have children with childhood diseases.”

As for Miller, she said, “We grew up with Jerry Lewis and his telethons, so I knew about muscular dystrophy. And in this case, the money raised stays locally, and that’s very important to me.”

The proceeds will fund patient services in the Greater Washington, D.C. area. They include two clinics at Georgetown University Hospital and Children’s National Medical Center, several support groups, financial assistance to repair wheelchairs and braces, and an expense-free, children’s summer camp in Maryland.

Scott Marschall, of Northwestern Mutual, a financial securities firm in the City of Fairfax, also collected donations from his company and its contacts. “I’ve raised $1,000 so far, but hope to reach $3,600,” he said. “We’ll get there.”

“I’m always looking for opportunities to give back to the community and other charitable organizations,” said Marschall. “This is a great cause and a unique set up, so it’s fun, at the same time.”

Ginny Trygstad raised money through her church, Christ Lutheran, in Fairfax. “I have a friend whose daughter-in-law and two grandchildren have muscular dystrophy, so that’s why I wanted to do this,” she said. “It’s fun. I raised over $1,000 so far.”

Also at the event was Lynda Falkenstein, of the City of Fairfax, with daughter Eowyn Worst, 3. “We know Ginny through church and we came to support her and the MDA,” said Falkenstein. “Ginny e-mailed me about her participation and I forwarded it on to 200 people, and they contributed, too. It was funny to take a picture of Ginny behind bars. If you’re going to raise money, you might as well have fun.”

Ryan O’Hare, managing partner at the Greenbriar Bonefish Grill, said the local MDA asked him about holding the event at the Chantilly restaurant. “Bonefish has been a longtime partner of MDA and has raised money over the years,” he said. “This past year, Bonefish raised over $150,000 nationally for MDA. So every time they approach us, we like to do what we can to support the cause.”

Besides the venue and the wait staff, Bonefish also supplied the lunch of Maryland-style crab cakes,ahi tuna sashimi, bang bang shrimp, Cajun chicken eggrolls, Caesar salad and Bonefish house salad.

“I think it went really well for the organization, and Bonefish enjoys getting involved with the community, anyway,” said O’Hare. “The community does so much to support our restaurant by eating here, so we’re happy to do anything we can to give back.”

Increasing Burden, But No Tools

State to cut hundreds of millions in expenditures that localities will have to pay for — but how?

I n Virginia, localities like Fairfax County, Arlington or the City of Alexandria, have only the exact powers that the Virginia General Assembly has bestowed upon them. The right to extend protection from discrimination to particular groups? No. The right to decide when school will open in the fall? No. The authority to tax income? No, only the exact powers that income is everywhere but here. Northern Virginia gets back less than 20 cents on the dollar it sends to Richmond. No “piggyback” income tax allowed. The authority for local elected officials to consider a variety of broad based sources of revenue to fund schools and other services? No.

Connolly Thanks State Leaders

The following letter was sent to Virginia Senate Majority Leader Dick Saslaw and House Minority Leader Mosby; it was written by Delegate Dave Menokin of western Loudoun County: Dear Majority Leader Saslaw and Speaker William Howell,

Dear Majority Leader Saslaw and Speaker Howell:

I am writing to commend both Houses of the Virginia General Assembly for restoring funding for Mason Neck State Park in your respective budgets. The Commonwealth of Virginia’s official Web site describes Mason Neck State Park as “a gem among Virginia’s fine state parks.” And if you’ve been there, you know that statement is no exaggeration.

As you know, Gov. McDonnell had proposed closing the only state park in Fairfax, Alexandria, Arlington, or Falls Church, in order to achieve a net savings of approximately $77,000. Along with many others in Northern Virginia, I have expressed strong opposition to closing the park, given the meager cost savings and significant loss to local businesses and residents.

According to Virginia’s Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR), closing Mason Neck would have eliminated $500,000 in economic activity at local businesses, more than offsetting the very small revenue gain for the state. Moreover, closing Mason Neck would have prevented 88,000 local residents, birdwatchers, kayakers and canoeists, girls scouts and boys scouts, students, environmentalists, hikers and tourists who visit the park each year from enjoying its rich tapestry of historical, cultural, environmental and educational offerings.

Saving less than $1 per visitor, at a cost of a half million dollars to local business, would have been shortsighted, and I applaud the General Assembly for keeping this State Park open. This State Park is too important to Northern Virginia, both in terms of economic activity and quality of life, to be shuttered for a pittance of cost savings. Thank you for your leadership on this important issue.

Making a Difference

To the Editor:

I want to thank you for recently publishing the written work of several of my students in the Children’s Edition of the Fairfax Connection. This singular act has done more to motivate and empower my children than any other writing we have completed thus far this school year. I can’t thank you enough for the opportunity you have provided my students. One child in particular was very resistant to writing. He would often be in tears because writing had become a chore and burden. It was all his handwriting teachers could do (Jasqueline Barrows and Dorothy Kleiber) to get him to write a sentence. Now that he has seen his work in print and heard the praise of his peers, he’s a new person. He now loves to write! Thanks so much for making a difference in the life of a child!

Eric Lengel, Fairhill Elementary

Not in Line With Rhetoric

To the Editor:

If the editorials in The Connection were fact checked like your stories are, U.S. Rep. Gerry Connolly’s “Getting Serious About Deficits” column [Fairfax Connection, Feb. 11-17, 2010] would have ended up on the cutting room floor.

Connolly’s latest mission to portray himself as being some sort of a fiscal conservative is laughable and misleading.

Lest look at some of the bills this “deficit hawk” has voted for lately, according to Project Vote Smart, washposton.com and other Web sites that monitor congressional voting records.

Connolly voted for the costly 2009 budget bill and the 2009 Economic Package. Last July, in an afternoon, he voted to commit $1.4 billion of taxpayers’ money to fund the beleaguered cash for clunkers program, on top of the billions of taxpayers’ dollars he had already voted to spend to start this program.

Connolly voted in favor of the House’s Healthcare plan, which the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office estimates could end up costing more than a trillion dollars over the next decade.

Finally, Dec. 16, 2009, the U.S. House or Representatives voted to increase the National Public Debt Limit from $12.1 trillion to $12.39 trillion. This bill only passed by four votes, 218-214. Who cast one of the decisive votes to up our tab to China and other foreign countries? Surprise, it was Gerry Connolly.

Can’t you tell, Gerry is really getting “serious” about deficits.

U.S. Rep. Connolly ran on the BEB (Blame Everything on Bush) platform and continues down that highway today, 13 months after President Obama has been in office, even through his very liberal friends Nancy Pelosi and Steny Hoyer somehow got the Democrats to support many of the expensive programs proposed by Congress and the administration during Bush’s last year in office.

It would be refreshing to hear Connolly take responsibility for his spending habits, but for now, I would urge every budget-conscious citizen in the 11th District to examine his voting record over the past 13 months. You will not find it to be in line with his deficit control rhetoric, not by a mile.

Fairfax
Think of the Helen Hayes Awards as the Washington D.C. professional theater community’s local version of the Tony Awards. To be nominated for the honor means an actor gave one of the best performances or was part of one the best shows of the year in this region.

So the fact that Rachel Boyd was part of the Signature Theatre “Les Misérables” cast that won the Helen Hayes Award for outstanding musical ensemble last year is a big deal. And Rachel is now part of the “Show Boat” ensemble at Signature, nominated for the same award again.

The Fairfax resident has had the type of critical and professional success that many actors have to wait years to accumulate. But at only eight years old, she hasn’t exactly been toiling away at her craft as a starving artist for years.

While another child might talk about joining the local soccer game, Rachel said she participates in professional shows because it is “cool.” She doesn’t get nervous when she is, for example, singing “Castle on a Cloud” as Cosette in “Les Miserables,” despite the fact that it is one of the most recognizable musical theater moments of all time.

“It is fun to pretend you are the actual person and not just playing the character. It is fun to get emotional because it is an emotional part,” said Rachel, who has logged almost enough hours on stage to qualify for her union card with the American Equity Association, not that she is that concerned about pay scale and benefits at this point.

“I like doing big shows, like that a lot. You have fun backstage experiences,” she said in an interview.

Local children and teenagers launch their show business careers early in life.

By Julia O’Donoghue
The Connection

LOCAL THEATRES have a need for talented children and young adults to play age appropriate roles. And Northern Virginia is home to many families who invest time and money on talent agents, dance classes and voice coaches so their children stand a better chance of landing

Role in a production at the likes of Arena Stage or the Kennedy Center. If a child is lucky enough to be in a role, the number of hours both of the child and the parents’ time, going to and from rehearsals and performances that can run four hours on a week night and up to 12 hours on the weekend. It can be exhausting for everyone involved. “But in all of this, I want my kids growing up and I don’t remember it taking up too much time. My daughter spends three or four times as many hours on a production than I ever did at sports,” said Tim Weichbrodt, whose teenage daughter Angela is in “Thief Like Me,” currently running at the Studio Theatre downtown. The family lives in Falls Church.

Most families said it is the child, not the family who is the driving force behind devoting so much time and energy trying out and performing in professional productions. “She goes to bed after a rehearsal or a show at midnight and gets up at 6 a.m. for school. I can’t remember the last time she hung out with her friends. I don’t know that many high school students who would be willing to give up time with their friends to do anything,” said Weichbrodt.

Sara Reimer also played Tiny Tim in Ford Theater’s “A Christmas Carol” and had a part in a Kennedy Center production of “Richard III.” She also handles all work just fine,” said Kent Jenkins.

Rachel Boyd at the Washington Business Hotel of Farm Dinner at the Washington Hilton.

“Frankly, if this is the life you are going to choose, it never gets easier. Most professional actors are working five days a week nine to five p.m. and then performing every night,” she said.

Burgundy Farm Country Day School student Kent Jenkins juggled 74 performances of the Shakespeare Theatre Company’s production of Richard III on top of his schoolwork in 2007. He played the Duke of York. Replicah, who worked as a professional actor for 22 years, said it can be a good lesson for his students on how to juggle school during the day and perform at night. “I guess it is what they would really have to do in an adult world. Most actors, even those who work regularly as professionals, have to hold down a day job and go get gigs. Even if they perform in productions regularly, it is in this life you are going to choose, it never gets easier. Most professional actors are working five days a week nine to five p.m. and then performing every night,” he said.

APPROACHING ONE-HUNDRED of Replicah’s students, mostly junior and senior in high school, have been paid to perform already. Approximately 90 percent of those have been on a professional audition, the teacher said. Replicah encourages students to audition for professional productions not only to improve their presentation and performance but also to have a better understanding of how much rejection is involved in the performing arts world.

“If you are going to work in this business, you have to have 90 percent in your age group and sex as terms of talent. Even then, you will still get cut for every 25 auditions you go on. By age 18, you make a few good auditions for every 25 auditions you go on. By age 20, it is just much harder. By age 25, you are probably getting cut for every five auditions.”

Who needs a high school education if you can get work and this is what I want to do?” said Alex.

Woodson loses in first round of tournament to Stuart, 52-46.

The Connection

The WT. Woodson boys’ basketball team’s string of come-back victories came to an end during the first round of the Northern Region tournament on Feb. 24. Once again, the Cavaliers found themselves trailing an opponent, but unlike their previous outings in the Patriot District tournament, the Cavaliers weren’t able to fight back to prolong their season.

Woodson, the Patriot District runner-up, lost 52-46 to J.E.B Stuart in a game that head coach Doug Craig said mirrored previous efforts this season.

“We’ve had several games where we just didn’t shoot the ball particularly well,” he said. “It was just another one of those games.”

Max Lenox led the Cavaliers in scoring with 36 points, but the rest of the team struggled to contribute on offense.

“(The low scoring) is just a credit to Stuart,” Craig said. “They played great defense.”

Steven Noe had only three points, while David Lowe, Jamie Donelan and David Nosal added two points to the team’s total.

“We just didn’t play our best game,” Craig said. “But you have to give Stuart credit. Their defense and game plan were better.”

The loss ends the Cavaliers first season in the Patriot District, where they finished with a 6-6 record and a 12-12 record overall.

Woodson, formerly of the Liberty District, started the season cold, but heated up as Craig and his players grew accustomed to life in their new district.

“Every district has good teams,” he said. “The Patriot District was just a much different style than the Liberty. The game just plays faster.”

With a year of Patriot District experience under his belt, Craig said his team learned how to change their style of play.

“Our kids learned how to compete [in the Patriot District],” he said. “There were some times early in the season we just didn’t compete in games and we got frustrated. Our kids have learned to handle that adversity now.”

Craig also found solace in his players’ efforts this season.

“Our kids have learned to handle that adversity now.”

The Cavs faced a difficult schedule, including out-of-district matches against Centreville and Eastern Region team Phoebus.

“Every team has their adversity each year,” he said. “We played a brutal schedule. I was really happy for the kids that we made our run [at the Patriot District title].”

The Cavs Patriot District title run is another point of pride for Craig, who said his team had begun to click when it mattered the most.

“We were playing our best basketball at the end of the year,” he said.

Snow Forces Spring Tryouts Indoors

With snow covered fields just now revealing grass, local teams cope.

By Reed S. Albers
The Connection

The problem with snow is that after the gloves have moved all they can, it’s a waiting game until the slushy slope of winter melts away. As local high school winter sports seasons come to a close, spring sports such as lacrosse, soccer, tennis and baseball are gearing up. But the lingering snow has forced the teams indoors, or to take creative measures in order to conduct tryouts.

At West Springfield, head boys’ soccer coach Andrew Saffron resisted the urge to manually shovel the school’s turf field. “Our turf field wasn’t clear and the school wouldn’t let us clear it,” Saffron said. “If we tried to manually clear it with shovels, it would void the field’s warranty.”

With no fields available, Saffron sent his boys indoors for tryouts. This isn’t the first time Saffron has dealt with indoor tryouts. He’s grown accustomed to the practice situation when the weather is bad.

“This has happened before,” he said. “Three or four years ago we had to have tryouts indoors. It’s not unheard of, it’s just not ideal.”

For Saffron and his soccer team, the gym’s confines weren’t the main concern.

“There’s 16 teams that need to use the gym as well as other organizations,” he said. “Your time is very limited.”

Even with a small timeframe, Saffron said some good comes out of seeing players on a gym floor rather than a soccer pitch.

“It’s kind of a bonus for some kids and a detriment to others,” he said. “In the past, we’ve had some kids who are good with the ball really well indoors, but outside they don’t have the team concepts down. Some are really good [on the field], but they don’t handle the ball well in close quarters.”

At Lake Braddock, 74 students tried out for the boys’ lacrosse team. While other teams waited for snow to melt away, the Bruins watched their makeshift practice space turn into a snow dumping ground.

“The day before we were supposed to start, trucks came in and dumped snow on half of our blacktop practice field,” head coach Steve Price said. “We didn’t even had a lot of space to practice.”

With such a small space to evaluate 74 players, Price said he was fortunate a former player came to the team’s rescue.

“A former player of mine came out with some Bobcat [construction] loaders and moved the snow about 20 yards,” he said. “We finally had some manageable space.”

At Robinson, the baseball and softball teams headed indoors, but baseball head Jeff Ferrell said his kids were prepared for an indoor tryout.

“Again, some of the kids are used to trying out indoors during the winter,” he said. “You still get a full infield indoors. I’m from Minnesota, so this isn’t all that unusual to me.”

Ferrell said a mix of sharing the gym and batting cages has cut into the small outdoor space, but baseball head Jeff Ferrell said his kids were prepared for an indoor tryout.

George Mason Theater presents Tennessee Williams’ classic.

The GMU Players and George Mason University’s Department of Theater are presenting performances of Tennessee Williams’ 1957 American classic “Orpheus Descending” on March 4-6 at 8 p.m. and March 6-7 at 2 p.m., at TheatreSpace on Mason’s Fairfax campus. A post-performance discussion follows the March 6 performance.

In “Orpheus Descending,” Val, a young musician with a guitar, wanders into a small southern town and takes a job at a store run by a middle-aged woman, who becomes entranced with Val. The play is a retelling of the Greek legend of the musician and poet Orpheus and his bride Eurydice.

Tickets are $12 and $8 for students, seniors and GMU faculty/staff. Limited free tickets are available for Mason students. Tickets may be purchased at the door an hour prior to the performance. To buy tickets by phone, or for directions, contact the Center for the Arts Box Office at 703-993-8888.

So this place means a lot to me,” said Mary Kellar. “It’s not just because of my parents’ visions, but because of my personal experience.”

The Kellar School currently has 40 students enrolled and a staff of 55. It provides an individualized educational program to students in grades six through 12 with emotional, behavioral and/or learning disabilities.

Mary Kellar said people have treated her daughter well. “She graduated high school because of them, the first one in this new building,” she said. “She was 16 then and didn’t want to go to school. But she liked it there because of the teachers, counselors and staff.”

Because of the center, said Leichtweis, “We’ve seen families stay together and more kids stay in their homes and experience success in the community.”

Mary Kellar’s sister, Judy Kellar Box, now of Crowheart, Wyo., said, “My dad wanted this to happen. This was something we needed then and still do, today; and Rick, likewise, is doing a wonderful job. He and the doctors are instrumental in the success of this facility.”

“My sister [Helen] had a drug problem as a teenager and young adult and died at age 36,” said Box. “My parents had nowhere to turn for help, in the 1970s, so they wanted to open something so kids with the same problems would be able to get some help.” The result was the Inova Kellar Center, created together by the Kellar Family Foundation and Inova Health System.

Yost Battles Injury at State Finals

Fairfax wrestler Jordon Yost didn’t enter the Virginia AAA state wrestling championship on Feb. 20 at 100 percent, but his fourth place finish in the 189-pound weight class showcased his gritty ability to compete.

During the regional meet on Feb. 17, Yost injured his ankle en route to a third place finish in the 189-pound weight class.

Two days later, he competed at the state finals, running on short rest and an ankle with three layers of tape wrapped around it and four pairs of socks to provide support.

“I haven’t recovered from the regional meet at all,” Yost said. “I was just running on adrenaline.”

Yost’s grit carried him through one round of the championship bracket, but he suffered a 17-10 loss to Deep Creek’s Charles Arnold.

“It was a takedown-fest,” he said. “I’m more of a mat wrestler, but my ankle caught up with me. It hurt really bad throughout the match.”

Following the loss, Yost moved to the consolation bracket, but said he had been told he could withdraw from the competition if wrestling had become too painful for him.

“My ankle] hurt a lot, but I [didn’t] let anyone know how much it hurt me,” Yost said. “It wasn’t a lot of fun. I was told I could give up, but I there’s always a chance [I could win]. I didn’t want to give up.”

Yost carried on with a 6-0 win over Lee Davis’ John Alexander, an 8-3 win over Hanover’s Kyle Locke, but his winning streak ended with a 4-2 loss to Forest Park’s Jorge Mendez in the bout for third place.

2009 Election Results

Filler-Corn Wins in 41st

“I am not surprised it was this close. She had a lot of money. She could buy television ads, which can make a big difference in a race this close,” said Supervisor John Bogan. (R-Springfield) watch election results come in for the 41st District House of Delegates race.

but former Del. Jim Dillard (R-41), who represented the district for more than 30 years before retiring in 2005, said the Republican Party could have done more to appeal to independent voters. “They would have won this seat if they had had a more moderate candidate,” he said.

Dillard, who has backed Marsden and a few other Democrats since leaving office, endorsed Filler-Corn in the local race, even though Filler-Corn had run against him in 1999. Dillard, the former chair of the House of Delegates education committee, said he was upset that Bolognese had called Virginia’s funding for education “excessive.” “Anyone that says that spending for education is excessive, I cannot support,” said Dillard.

The prospect of a close race was likely a factor in the surprisingly high voter turnout for a special election. Twenty-four percent of registered voters showed up to participate in the special election. A few polling places, including those at Sangster, Orange Hunt Elementary School and Lake Braddock Secondary School, had close to 30 percent turnout.

By comparison, the Fairfax County chairman special election in February 2009 produced a 16 percent turnout and the Braddock District special election in March 2009 yielded an 18 percent voter turnout.

In January, Marsden took a State Senate seat that had long been held by Republicans with only 300 votes and a 2 percent margin of victory over Republican Steve Hunt. Cook won the special election for the Braddock District supervisor’s race with fewer than 100 votes last year.

Both campaigns worked hard to get as many voters to the polls as possible.

“I have gotten reminders and phone calls from both parties. They even left a door hanger at my house this morning,” said Steve Brawn, a Springfield resident who votes at Sangster Elementary School.
